After the jury had been out about 20 minutes a recess was taken until half-past 5 o'clock. Many of the audience, who had virtually been imprisoned since half-past 9 in the morning, availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain fresh air and lunch.

THE PRISONER.

at his request, had been allowed, soon after the jury left the court room, to retire to the little room he has occupied since the trial began as a waiting room, during recess. Before leaving the court room he evinced considerable nervousness, but on getting away to comparative seclusion his usual composure and assurance soon returned to him. He sent out for some apples, with which he treated his attendants, meanwhile chatting familiarly and good-naturedly.

WHAT HE EXPECTED.

He was asked what he thought the jury would do, and replied, "I think they will acquit me or disagree, don't you?"

QUICK WORK.

Within 10 minutes after the recess had been taken the jury called to the bailiff in waiting that they were ready with their verdict. They were informed that recess had been taken and Judge Cox had left the court room; so they remained in their room until the court reassembled.

THE NEWS FLIES.

The rumor that the jury had agreed was quickly spread from one to another, and the excited crowd surged back into the court room and anxiously awaited what all seemed to expect, a verdict of guilty.

SCENE IN THE COURT.

The musty, antique room is devoid of gas and the score or more of candles which had been placed upon the desk of the judge, counsel and reporters, imparted a weird and fancifully unnatural aspect to the grim old place. The shadows thrown upon the dark background of the walls seemed like a flitting specter to usher in a sombre procession of those who held in their hands the destiny of a human being. First came the prisoner, with a quick nervous step, and as he seated himself in the dock, perhaps for the last time, the light of a solitary candle fell full upon his face and disclosed its more than usual pallor. Not a tremor of the limbs or movement of the muscles of the face was observable as he threw back his head and fixed his gaze upon the door through which the jury were to enter. Judge Cox soon afterwards took his seat, the crier called "order," and the jury at 5:35 filed slowly into their seats. Every sound was hushed save the voice of the clerk, as he propounded to the foreman the usual inquiry. Clear and distinct came the reply, "We have." "What is your verdict?" "Guilty or not guilty?" With equal distinctness came the reply, "GUILTY AS INDICTED."

Then the pent up feelings of the vast crowd found expression in an uproarious demonstration of applause and approval. "Order, order," shouted the bailiffs.

Seville and counsel for the prosecution were simultaneously upon their feet. Seville attempted to address the court, but the district attorney shouted,

SATURDAY, JANUARY 28, 1882.

GUILTY.

That is the Verdict in the Guiteau Trial.

The Closing Scenes in the Most Noted Criminal Trial in the Annals of the Country.

Last Wednesday afternoon the news was flashed by telegraph over the world that the jury in the Guiteau trial had rendered a verdict of "guilty as indicted."

The news reached Cheboygan in the evening and soon was the general topic of conversation and the feeling expressed over the verdict was one of general exultation that the dastardly coward and blasphemous wretch was likely at last to receive his just deserts. The verdict lifted a load off the minds of all, for it was greatly feared that there would be a disagreement of the jury and that the country would be again afflicted with the disgrace of another trial. The news of the verdict was hailed with satisfaction all over the United States, it being the universal verdict of the American people and in keeping with the voice of the nation demanding that the foul assassin be hanged. The following particulars of the closing scenes of the trial we take from the telegraphic report as published in the Bay City Tribune of Thursday, a copy of which we were kindly furnished by Capt. E. A. Bouchard, who was fortunate enough to procure it from the train Thursday evening.

THE JURY OUT.

After the jury had been out about 20 minutes a recess was taken until half-past 5 o'clock. Many of the audience, who had virtually been imprisoned since half-past 9 in the morning, availed themselves of the opportunity to obtain fresh air and lunch.

"Wait till we have the verdict complete and in due form of law." Order was at length restored and the clerk again addressing the jury said, "Your foreman says, 'Guilty as indicted; so say we all of us.'" "We do," all responded.

ANOTHER DEMONSTRATION OF APPROVAL followed this announcement, not so prolonged as the first. Seville, still upon his feet, demanded the poll of the jury, which was granted, and each juror was called by name and each in a firm voice promptly responded, "Guilty."

As the last name was called, the prisoner shrieked, "My blood will be upon the heads of that jury; don't you forget it."

Seville again addressed the court saying: "Your honor, I do not desire to forfeit any rights I may have under the law and practice in this district. If there is anything that I ought to do now to save those rights, I would be indebted to your honor to indicate it to me."

Judge Cox in reply assured him he should have every opportunity; that the charge would be furnished him in print and he would be accorded all the time allowed by law within which to file his exceptions, and that he would also be entitled to four days within which to move in arrest of judgment.

GUILTEAU'S DESPERATION.
